

ACCELERATE DEAL READINESS WITH ADVANCED ASSET STAGING

Early readiness is a major factor in the success of a portfolio company exit. The ability to privately share relevant, accurate information to enable secure and discreet analysis of the opportunity is essential. A deal can be easily lost while you scramble to assemble the deal team, aggregate data, or choose a data room provider on short notice. Here's how DatasiteOne Diligence can help you avoid these challenges.

CHALLENGES

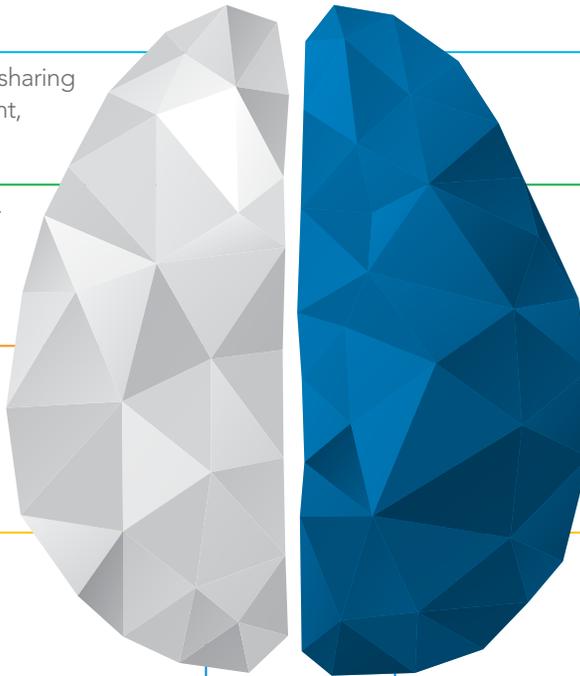

Using off-the-shelf storage platforms and email, even for sharing basic financial updates and board books, is risky, inefficient, and unsecure.

Awaiting banking partner direction on file organization or data room selection reduces readiness and can result in a sluggish response to new exit opportunities.

Securing sensitive financial, technology, intellectual property and employee data during deal readiness using off-the-shelf document sharing platforms puts deal control, confidentiality, and valuation at risk.

The scramble to select a data room provider, re-organize, redact, and move files back and forth after you have selected a banker, wastes time, slows your deal, and risks alienating buyers.

Using multiple document sharing platforms throughout the portfolio company management, deal preparation and due diligence cycles puts deal data tracking and audit and compliance reporting at risk.
